

Dr Layton is a former senior fellow and chief executive of the New Zealand Institute of Economic Research (NZIER).

He has been a director or chair of organisations in sectors as diverse as banking and finance, health, scientific research, electricity, food processing, transport and information technology.

As a consultant prior to joining the Authority, Dr Layton's work has spanned macro and microeconomics and corporate finance. Much of his work has involved regulatory economics and responses to regulatory change.

In 2009, Dr Layton chaired the Ministerial Review of the governance and performance of the electricity market.